

Abominations in the Eyes of GOD

It is deeply troubling to observe that certain human practices have come to instrumentalize living beings even in their most intimate aspects, particularly when the collection and commercialization of animal semen are carried out without measure, without respect, and within a purely utilitarian logic.

When such acts are performed without regard for the dignity of the animal or the natural balance, they may be seen as a serious deviation, a form of violation of the order of life itself, especially before GOD.

In contrast, natural reproduction embodies harmony, fairness, and a profound respect for established cycles. It reminds us that not everything should be subjected to human will alone or to productivity-driven logic.

Encouraging a return to more respectful, measured practices that are aligned with the living world also means establishing an essential boundary: recognizing that not everything is meant to be transformed or exploited, and that certain limits deserve to be preserved.

Thank you for teaching with striking clarity the mystery of life.

For giving life is not an ordinary act, but a sacred responsibility.

You are called to something greater: to participate, with dignity and righteousness, in the building of a renewed world.

Whether through choices guided by God, or through the action of the Holy Spirit when everything is accomplished in rightful order, then true children of God are born.

These children are not given over to the influences of the world nor to its deviations. They are protected, raised with wisdom, and formed into a life that is upright, humble, and enlightened — in the likeness of those who seek purity and inner discipline, like consecrated brothers.

For this is indeed the time of discernment and justice upon the very foundations of this world. And what does not come from God will be revealed for what it truly is.

Thus, everything must be accomplished in truth, respect, and light.
